Research and Scholarship

Focus

My research explores problems and issues that micropolitan areas face.

Impact

My research has provided extensive local impact. Mr. Jay Buyer (associate city manager), the has stated that I have provided concrete data validating that there was indeed a problem with housing, an issue that was previously suspected but, until this point, unverified. He said: In fact, his findings revealed that two-thirds of people working in Pittsburg commute due to inadequate housing options. This, in turn, led to a shift in priorities for the city. A housing director was hired; incentive programs were developed; efforts to attract residential housing developers were made, and a marketing campaign targeting these developers was created. Enclosed is a direct quote:

"We're interested in making what I would call evidence-based decisions related to policy, and we really would like as much information as we can, objective information," said Jay Byers, assistant city manager. "The work (Davidson's) done has contributed directly to policy decisions that we're making at the local level, and we're talking about substantial amounts of money here; we're talking about tens of millions of dollars of investment in the community."
