Research and Scholarship

Focus

My research area focuses on empirical corporate finance, specifically examining the impact of corporate governance on firm performance and capital structure.

Impact

Research on corporate governance aims to clarify effective governance practices and their implementation, which can impact a firm's long-term success, stability, and ethical conduct. By employing rigorous frameworks and methodologies, this research challenges common misconceptions and contributes to academic knowledge. Additionally, it benefits practitioners, businesses, and the public by offering valuable guidance for making informed investment decisions.
